

CHEVROLET IS FINED $6.

Race Winner Will Have to Face Speeding Charge Also in Newark.

William L. Dill, State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, spoke too quickly at his weekly hearing in the Newark City Hall yesterday when Gaston Chevrolet, automobile racer and speedway winner, was fined $6 on a charge of failing to dim his headlights.

In imposing the fine Commissioner Dill complimented Chevrolet that in spite of his racing tendencies he was not charged with speeding. The racer bowed graciously, paid his fine and left the building, and not five minutes later a complaint charging Chevrolet with reckless driving was read off by the clerk. It had been mislaid among other papers. It was too late to recall the racing driver, but he will be summoned again next Monday.

The reckless driving charge is based on Chevrolet's having bumped a wagon while going to his home in Plainfield after the Sheepshead Bay races Friday, where he was among the winners.
